electronic data representing a money balance is less than the amount of money required for the transaction.

37.   A method according to claim 36, wherein electronic data representing money is input from and/or output to an external terminal through a data input/output circuit in said IC card.

38.   An method according to claim 36, wherein said external terminal inputs said electronic data of a loan into said loan memory of said IC card without first contacting any other device.